Miss Betham Edwards in her "Home Life in France" writes: "The best contemporary French writers often use English words not as yet naturalized, without italies or quotation marks. Thus Cherbuliez wrote of the hall in-stead of 'le vestibule' in one of his novels; Brizeux makes a lady conjugate the verb 'luncher' in one of his plays. Flirt, croquet, garden party, five o'clock, and a variety of similar expressions are employed as if belonging to the French tongue. English names and pet names have an especial attraction for French ears."

There is a pitiful story of Philip Bourke Marston, the blind English writer. One day a particularly good idea came to him and he sat down to his typewriter with enthusiasm. He wrote rapidly for hours and had nearly finished the story when a friend came in. "Read that," said Marston proudly, "and tell me what you think The friend stared at the hap py author and then at the blank sheets of paper in his hand before he was able to understand the little tragedy. The ribbon had been taken from the typewriter and Marston's toil was for nothing. He never had the heart to write that story again.

Hall Calne thinks that the novel of the future will become more and more the religious novel and that it will only be accepted, whether by the plowman or the philosopher, in the degree in which it unites with the simplest pictures of human life the deepest problems of humanity. "I think it will be realized." he says, "that the capacity of the novel for any work whatsoever, whether of simple entertainment or of deep teaching, is entirely without limit; that there is no vehicle so capable of reaching a wide area, no medium so adaptable to the needs of man in all his stages of intellectual development; in a word. that there is no pulpit with a sounding board that will send the human voice # 60 far."

AN EPIDEMIC OF SCANDALS

The Administration Is Involved & Some Unsavory Performances.

As fast as the republican party tries to dispose of one scandal another appears upon the surface. The post office scandal is still on deck, and only a few of the minor accomplices have yet been tried and punished. The land fraud cases are in court and all the republican delegation in congress from Oregon, except Senator Fulton, have been indicted, and Senator Mitchell is now being tried. Land frauds in California are said to be of greater extent than in Oregon, and nearly every western state has more or less trouble of

The asphalt scandal in Venezuela has been settled on the surface, but the real merits of the case have never been investigated. The main question is, was the administration backing the trust, which is charged by Venezuela with furnishing arms and aid to a revolutionary faction to overthrow our sister republic?

The Santa Fe rebate scandal has taken a more serious turn since Attorney General Moody has refused to carry out the recommendations of Judges Harmon and F. N. Judson, who were appointed by the administration to investigate. They seem to have struck a forced retirement from the cabinet involves the administration in the scan-

The Santo Domingo scandal has been confined to the scandal box, and a special government agent is sitting on the The cotton report scandal is still under investigation and the scope of the investigation is widening.

The scandal in the treasury department in selection of post office sites it in, and might have attempted to has already led to the indictment of transplant it in New York or Chicago, Special Agent Blanton, and the facts will be more fully exposed when his case comes on for trial. Hardly a week passes but some new scandal develops that involves some republican official. These facts show that however much President Roosevelt may wish to clean up the Augean stables the task is beyoud his power, unless he will make a clean sweep of some of the bureaus and departments. That, of course, he cannot do for party reasons as, if the truth were known of all the grafters great and small, the voters would demand a new deal.

The most necessary reform is to elect next year a democratic majority of the house of representatives, who would then have power to investigate the scandals. The party in power never can do much to get rid of its parasites, for they all hang on together, and many of the partisan leaders protect them, fearing exposure will hurt the republican party.

UNCLE SAM BUYING ABROAD

Government Transaction That Gives the Protective System a Black Eye

It will surprise a good many oldfashioned republicans to know that under our protective tariff system even the Chinerse can beat us building ships. And what will cause greater surprise is the fact that this govern-ment contracted with the \hampon Shipbuilding company, whose yards are about 12 miles from Canton, China, to construct eight ships for service in the insular possessions of the United States in the orient. During the past year these eight vessels have been launched and delivered at Manila. In reporting this news the Washington Post further Bays:

feet long, of 1,000-horse power, and their contracts called for a speed of 12 knots an hour. Some of them developed a speed of one-sixth of a knot better than this over their trial courses. They cost the government in no case less than $85,000 each.

"Although Chinese help is used at Whampoa, wherever available, it is said that the ships could be constructed here at the same cost.

"Capt. Harry Strue, formerly of the United States transport Mancock, supervised the building of these shirs, and saw that they were delivered at Manila. He was acting under Commander James Helm, captain of the port of Manila. It is said that nothing concerning the launching of these vessels appeared in the Canton newspapers because a request had been made to refrain from making anything public about the American ships at the Whampoa yards." 'It can hardly be possible that, as the Post says, that the ships could have been contracted for here at the same cost, for to give this large contract to a foreign firm and thus deprive our shipyards and workmen of the profit and work is not believable unless the price was less. It is well known that the shipbuild ing trust and the steel trust have for years held up Uncle Sam for building elsewhere. But why the secrecy; why not be open and above board in the

MARKETING POTATO CROPS.

How the Railroads Made It Possible for the Growers to Get Fair

Prices. In line with the classic case of the oyster shippers, cited by President Hadley, of Yale University, in his book on Railroad Transportation, is the case of the Aroostook potato growers brought by President Tuttle, of the Boston and Maine Railroad before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. Nothing could better show how a railroad works for the interest of the localities which it serves. A main dependence of the farmers of the Aroostook region is the potato an American would doubtless have bid crop, aggregating annually eight to ten million bushels which find a market largely in Boston and the adjacent thickly settled regions of New England. The competition of cheap water transportation from Maine to all points along the New England coast keeps rallroad freight rates on these potatoes always at a very low level.

Potatoes are also a considerable output of the truck farms of Michigan, their normal market being obtained in and through Detroit and Chicago and other communities of that region.

Not many years ago favoring sun and rains brought a tremendous yield of potatoes from the Michigan fields. At normal rates and prices there would have been a glut of the customary markets and the potatoes would have rotted on the farms. To help the potato growers, the railroads from Michigan made unprecedentedly low rates on potatoes to every reachable market, even carrying them in large quantities to a place so remote as Boston. The Aroostook growers had to reduce the price on their potatoes, and even then could not dispose of them in the dog watch, while I was carryin' unless the Boston and Maine railroad a baby jib. I stepped on a starboard tack reduced its already low rate, which it and blood pisin ensooed.—Pittsburg did.
